EXCEPT FOR THE fact that the major oil companies preserve unanimity that their prices of gasoline throughout B.C. are "strictly competitive" the royal commission trying to establish whether the oil distributors are justified in raising gasoline prices in the provincial hinterland does not seem to be making much progress.

Started early in 1964, the commission has been holding hearings all over the province. It has heard that the same gasoline which sells in the Vancouver-Victoria area at about 40 cents a gallon costs about 65 cents in some faraway places in the north.

The oil companies say the price differential is based on purely economic grounds. It costs more to sell a gallon of gasoline in Atlin than it does in Saanich. There seems to be no disagreement on that

But the people of the hinterland who claim that gasoline is one of their essentials feel they should not be placed at an economic disadvantage with their competitors in more crowded parts of the province, and they claim that gasoline should be treated like electric power, for which there is a standard rate throughout the province.

In the case of electrical power, the people in the cities are unquestionably subsidizing those in the remote rural areas, but in this case there is only one supplier—the provincially owned B.C. Hydro—who subsidizes other things as well, such as urban transit.

It would clearly be more difficult to subsidize gasoline prices where so many refiners and distributors are involved, and it would appear that unless these companies are willing to compromise voluntarily there might be a determined move to reinstitute those petroleum price controls about which the industry was so unhappy in the early post-war years.

To make matters worse for the royal commission, It is running into a brick wall when it attempts to obtain figures that break down the actual costs of manufacturing various petroleum products. Because crude oil is put to dozens of end-uses as it goes through the refining plants, the companies say it is impossible for them to break down the cost of the separate components of the production line. The commission is thus at a disadvantage in attempting to determine whether the gasoline price structure in

As the oil riches of B.C. are in the north-central part of the province, and two companies are now refining oil at Fort St. John and Kamloops, with another refinery planned for Prince George, it would seem that some of the transportation difficulties presently affecting the oil companies in setting their northern prices may be alleviated.

If they were able to reach a new price structure that would commend itself as fair to the royal commission, as well as meeting some of the objections of their northern consumers, it might be the wise way out of the troublesome situation.

B.C. Spurns Treaty-Making Powers

By IAN STREET

B.C. has no desire to negotiate its own treaties abroad. Quebec's claim to treaty-making powers under the constitution find no answering echo in this province, though Premier Bennett is quick to point out that B.C. is

The premier was asked the other day whether the Quebec attitude will make any difference to B.C.'s approach to the proposed export to the U.S. of power he hopes to see developed on the Liard River. His answer was a blunt negative.

Despite serious differences with Ottawa over the negotiating of the Columbia River treaty, Mr. Bennett says, it is the job of the federal government to handle treaty-making and B.C. would continue to respect this

We believe in co-operative federalism," he says. It wasn't mony months ago, last fall in fact, at the B.C.-Alaska-Yukon conference in Whitehorse that this government stoutly proclaimed it would bypass the International Joint Commission in seeking joint development with Alaska of the Iskut River.

The plans calls for joint development of potential on the Iskut for use by industry on the B.C. side of the border and by the Alaska panhandle commu of Wrangell and Petersburg.

A B.C. constitutional expert argues, however, that this kind of arrangement need not constitute treaty-making and therefore doesn't have to involve the national govern ments. It could be done by contract.

The contracting parties in this case, presumably, would be B.C. Hydro and whatever organization distributes power in the Alaska panhandle

The same authority claims that the present arrangement for joint development of Columbia River power to supply needs both in this province and south of the border could, I repeat could, have been arrived at without the umbrella of the present international treaty.

The Columbia is an example of the power a province wields while not actually participating in international

Canada and the U.S. both signed the original Columbia Treaty back in 1961. But since the resource was controlled by the province, B.C. stalled for three years until it obtained an acceptable agreement with Ottawa.

Quebec's education minister and constitutional expert Paul Gerin-Lajote, however, has asserted his government's right to initiate international agreements not only in matters under provincial jurisdiction but in the federal-provincial field as well.

B.C. is puzzled by the authority for this claim. Treatymaking powers under the Fulton-Favreau formula for amending Canada's constitution remain unchanged.

The British North America Act states: "The parliament and government of Canada shall have all powers necessary and proper for performing the obligations of Canada or of any province thereof . . . toward foreign ntries, arising under treaties. . . ."

It may well be that Quebec will seek a new definition of treaty-making powers at the next federal-provincial conference scheduled for May 31. But if there are to be major changes in the constitution, B.C. has indicated the le basis of confederation should be examined.

The proposed constitutional amendments permit differences in regional attitudes and a diversity that B.C. helieves is essential in a country as large as this .
It's a case of "vive is difference."

Meteor is a car that turns heads wherever it goes. Now is the time you went further than just admiration. Meteor is a big car with the most beautiful styling (note those clear-cut, elegant fender lines and the gracefully sloping trunk deck). Meteor fits neatly into the popular-priced class. But then, everything about Meteor is made to be popular-especially with you!

Meteor gives you the newest, most comfortable ride! You enjoy undisturbed motoring comfort when you ride in Meteor. It all begins with a wheelbase that stretches to a roud-smoothing 123 inches (longest in its class) and a new "torque-box" frame that flexes its muscles to absorb road shock and vibration. When you test-drive Meteor, head for the roughest road you know. Then you'll see how Meteor's gliding ride can tame it!

Meteor handles with the least effort, the most smoothness! Meteor's improved all-coil suspension keeps cushioned comfort between you and the road-without that "floating" sensation. Meteor's handling advances include new 15<sup>4</sup> low-profile tires that provide broader, surer road contact.

When you put Meteor through its paces, you'll find that its handling is engineered to handle you with care.

Meteor's performance has never been more impressive! The road-hungry 352 and 390 V-8's give you an exciting insight into high performance. And the hot new 240 cubic inch 'Avenger' Six has pioneered a combination of power and economy that makes it the front-runner in '6' performance! Although many, like Bob Pedersen, president of the Vancouver Island Affiliated Fish and Game Clubs, were disappointed with the content, most were happy to see the parks situation outlined in more detail.

Everything is coming up roses for the National Hockey League, the tight little group which controls what hockey is worth while controlling in Canada and the United States. All that is needed to make it absolutely perfect is for New York Rangers and Boston Bruins to catch up to the other four clubs, and there are signs that both are at least starting to make some progress in that direction.

Last season a championship race which ended with Montreal Canadiens winners by one point over Chicago Black Hawks, was followed by one of the most interesting Stanley Cup playdowns of all time, with both semi-finals and the final going the limit of seven games.

It was an act hard to follow, but this season Detroit Red Wings played inspired bookey for an amazingly popular championship, it took 13 of the possible 14 games to decide the Stanley Cup finalists and the final goes into its seventh game tomorrow. Hockey interest across the country has been maintained at the peak it reached last spring, some-thing that appeared impossible at the time.

It may be that this season's Stanley Cup playoffs doesn't quite have the comph of last season's post-schedule series, but as the final goes into its seventh game there is the distinct impression that it is being fought out between the

Detroit's adherents, and they are many, may argue the point but the Wings, just like the Leafs, were a bit old in a few positions and they didn't quite have enough left to carry on after all their all-out effort in winning the league

For quantity of quality no one can quite match Cana-They have three fine forward lines, and a feature of the NHL in the past two seasons, was how their defence was rebuilt by bringing in Jacques Laperriere, Terry Harper and

And the Hawks, who have for several seasons probably heen able to ice the best starting lineup in the league, have at last almost bearen their lack of depth by developing Chico Maki and Phil Esposito and acquiring Matt Ravlich and Veteran Doug Mohns.

Quibblers may argue that the current final is earmarked by inconsistency and the inability of the competing teams to win when not on home ice, but there are more interesting facets than in most finals, and this one is adding more than its share to Stanley Cup lore.

Every game brings the interesting battle between Bobby Hull and his shadow, Claude Provost. The honors are all Provost's at the moment—Hull having scored his two goals when Provost was off the ice—but shackling Hull is some-thing akin to defusing a bomb. It could go off at any time. On the other side of the fence, the Hawks appear to have been paying particular attention to Henri Richard, bullying him at every opportunity to try and get over the message that he had better always keep his head up.

Perhaps even more interesting have been the unexpected individual developments on both sides, outstanding performances by comparative newcomers or by veterans who hadn't been expected to contribute as much as they have.

Perhaps the steadest Chicago performer, excluding goalkeeper Glenn Hall, has been Ravlich, a 26-year-old rookie defenceman who had to toil through six minor league seasons before he got an honest NHL chance. Not far behind for the Hawks has been the play of rookie centre Esposito, who has shown moves which indicate that when he retires he'll be able to look forward to a fine income from the NHL pension plan.

One of the big stories for Canadiens has been the brilliant play of J. C. Tremblay, a 25-year-old defenceman in his fourth full assum with the club. But while Tremblay has never been better, he was a sort of an unrecognized star better the playdowns, and parkage more surprising contributions have been made by two other players.

Tiny Bobby Rousseau, who was tagged with hockey's equivalent of baseball's "good-hit, no-field" tag, has been a disfensive white and sombomore. Jim Roberts has been a defensive whiz and sopohomore Jim Roberts has been absolutely outstanding as a penalty-killer—something that really matters in the bristling hockey the playdowns have

But while we have had all this, plus Stan Mikita looking somewhat less than the great player he is and John Ferguson's triumph over Eric Neste this television observer has been additional proof that victory for the Hawks will come tomorrow only if they are able to control Jean Beliveau.

Beliveny is the unquestioned ice leader of the Montreal rlub, and if Canadiens win it will be a miscarriage of justice if he isn't selected as the first winner of the Conn Smythe Trophy, which is to go each year to the outstanding player Stanley Cup playdowns As a matter of fact, it probably shouldn't depend on who wins tomorrow unless Hull, tremendous in the semi-final against Wings but so far somewhat ineffective in the final, comes up with a great, and

The Hawks have stopped Beliveau three times in the final—if you count last Sunday's game, in which he produced the 1-1 goal only to see his club victimized late in the game and go down, 5-1.

Each of the three times, the Hawks have won. In the three Montreal victories, Beliveau made the play for the 3-2 goal in the first game, he scored the first goal and set second in a 20 shutout, then scored two and set up two of the first four goals in that 6-0 rout last Tue And in between his offensive leading he was controlling the play each time he was on the ice.

Perhaps one of the lesser lights will decide matters tomarrow but home ice and Baliveau give the sage to Canadiens. He has been all the hockey player they expected him to be when Canadiens made a professional league out of the Quebec Hockey League to get him in their uniform.

In two shakes.

That's all ... If you use this remarkable new gardening aid. Flower beds, rock gardens shrubberies... just two sprinklings of Greenfield Weed Preventer and you can relax for the rest of the season. No more pulling up weeds one by one, no more fiddling around with messy sprays. Greenfield Weed Preventer is unique. Its granules work underground to prevent weeds from germinating. But those Green field granules won't harm established flowers, shrubs or bulbs; they just stop weeds. Before they start. The 25 oz. shaker can of Greenfield Weed Preventer covers 250 square feet of garden.

And the cost? Only $1.98. Not much to pay for a weed-free summer, is it?

The White Hope

By M. V. CHESNUT, PRHS

Earlier this year I made a passing mention of the $10,000 award offered to the first person who succeeds in growing a pure white marigoid. This seems to have attracted quite a bit of attention, and several readers have asked me to explain the deal.

The idea of the award originated with David Burpee, president of the W. Atlee Burpee Co. in California. Mr. Burpee has a passionate and abiding interest in the marigold, and in fact, his firm has done most of the breeding and development which has made the modern marigold the popular flower it is today.

As I have mentioned before, the United States, as a country, has no official floral emblem, although each one of the individual states has an been suggested as a national flowler, including the rose, but most of these have already been adopted, either by another country or by one or more as much dithering in the U.S. over the choice of a flower as we, in Canada, have experienced in the choice of a emblem for the U.S. is the marigold, and he has a lot of arguments in its favor. He points out, for instance, that the marigold is a native of the Americas and grows wild nowhere else on earth. No other country or state is using the marigold as a floral emblem, and this flower will grow and thrive in every part of the U.S., including Alaska and Hawaii.

Mr. Burpee isn't content simply to offer his opinion on this point; he has had himself registered officially with the state department as a lobbyist on hehalf of the marigold. He has prepared a draft of a bill which would make the marigold the official flower of the U.S., and he has gained quite a bit of support in official Washington for his proposed bill.

David Burpee is most anxious to extend the color range of the marigold, for this would unquestionably increase its popularity. The natural colors are in the yellow and orange shades, extending into brown and reddish brown in some kinds, but it is Mr. Burpee's ambition to find a pure white flower in the marigold family, for once way will be open to introduce other colors and produce, perhaps, a blue, a pink or a purple marigold.

Burpee's scientific staff has come fairly close to the long-sought white marigold, and the varieties Whitley, Hopeful and Man in the Moon are all so far none has been free of a trace of vellow in its coloring.

While the Burpee scientists continue to experiment with colchicine, X-rays and atomic irradiation in an effort to force a breakthrough, Mr. Burpee himself is convinced the white marigold will turn up unexpectedly in somebody's garden as a result of a chance mutation. So everybody will be on the lookout, he is offering $10,000 to the first person who delivers to him seeds which will produce a marigold 25 inches or more across the bloom and pure white in color.

Several hundred seed samples were submitted and grown in the Burpee test plot last year, and while none turned out to be completely free from traces of cream or yellow coloring. four entries came close enough to win $100 consolation awards.

Here, then, is another reason for including marigolds in your floral plans for 1965. The modern largeflowered kinds will ordinarily bloom in yellow and orange shades, but because they are highly-hred hybrids with rather unstable characteristics, anything could happen, and it is quite within the bounds of possibility the elusive white marigold could turn up in YOUR garden and win the $10,000

WHY PAY MORE

Last season a championship race which ended with Montreal Canadiens winners by one point over Chicago Black Hawks, was followed by one of the most interesting Cup playdowns of all time, with both semi-finals and the final going the limit of seven games,

It was an act hard to follow, but this season Detroit Red Wings played inspired bookey for an amazingly-popular championship, it took 13 of the possible 14 games to decide 2 the Stanley Cup finalists and the final goes into its seventh game tomorrow. Hockey interest across the country has been maintained at the peak it reached last spring, some thing that appeared impossible at the time that this season's Stanley Cup playoffs doesn't quite have the comph of last season's post-schedule series, but as the final goes into its seventh game there is the distinct impression that it is being fought out between the two best clubs in the NHL Detroits acherents, and they are many, may argue the roint but the Wings, just like the Leafs, were a bit old in a few positions and they didn't quite have enough left to carry on after all their all-out effort in winning the league

For quantity of quality no one can quite match Cana-They have three fine forward lines, and a feature of the NHL in the past two seasons, was how their defence was 1-built by bringing in Jacques Laperriere, Terry Harper and

And the Hawks, who have for several seasons probably been able to ice the best starting lineup in the league, have at last almost heaten their lack of depth by developing Chico Maki and Phil Esposito and acquiring Matt Ravlich and veteran Doug Mohns.

Quibblers may argue that the current final is ear marked by inconsistency and the inability of the competing teams to win when not on home kee, but there are more interesting facets than in most finals, and this one is adding more than its share to Stanley Cup lore.

Every game brings the interesting battle between Bobby Hull and his shadow, Claude Provost. The honors are all Provost's at the moment-Hull having scored his two goals when Provost was off the ice-but shackling Hull is some thing akin to defusing a bomb. It could go off at any time. On the other side of the fence, the Hawks appear to bullying him at every opportunity to try and get over the message that he had better always keep his head up. Perhaps even more interesting have been the unexpected individual developments on both sides, outstanding performances by comparative newcomers or by veterans who hadn't have been paying particular attention to Henri Richard, been expected to contribute as much as they have. Perhaps the steadiest Chicago performer, excluding goelkeeper Glenn Hall, has been Ravlich, a 26-year-old rookie defendeman who had to toil through six minor league seasons before he got an honest NHL chance. Not far behind for the Hawks has been the play of rookie centre Esposito, who has shown moves which indicate that when he retires he'll be able to look forward to a fine income from the NHL pension plan. One of the big stones for Canadiens has been the brilliant play of J. C. Tremblay, a 26-year-old defenceman in his fourth full season with the club. But while Tremblay has never been better, he was a sort of an unrecognized star before the playdowns, and perhaps more surprising contributions have been made by two other players.

Tiny Bobby Rousseau, who was tagged with hockey's equivalent of baseball's "good-hit, no-field" tag, has been a defensive whiz and sopohomore Jim Roberts has been absolutely outstanding as a penalty-killer-something that really matters in the bristling hockey the playdowns have

But while we have had all this, plus Stan Mikita looking somewhat less than the great player he is and John Ferguson's triumph over Eric Nesterenko, the feature to this television observer has been additional proof that victory for the Hawks will come tomorrow only if they are able to control Jean Beliveau.

Beliveau is the unquestioned ice leader of the Montreal club, and if Canadiens win it will be a miscarriage of justice if he isn't selected as the first winner of the Con Smythe Trophy, which is to go each year to the outstanding player in the Stanley Cup playdowns. As a matter of fact, it probably shouldn't depend on who wins tomorrow unless Hull, tremendous in the semi-final against Wings but so far somewhat ineffective in the final, comes up with a great, and Winning, game.

The Hawks have stopped Beliveau three times in the final if you count last Sunday's game, in which he produced the 1-1 goal only to see his club victimized late in the game and go down, 5-1.

Each of the three times, the Hawks have won. In the three Montreal victories, Beliveau made the play for the 32 goal in the first game, he scored the first goal and set up the second in a 20 shutout, then scored two and set up two of the first four goals in that 6-0 rout last Tuesday And in between his offensive leading he was controlling the play each time he was on the ice.

Perhaps one of the lesser lights will decide matters form but home ice and Beliveau give the edge to Canadiens. He has been all the hockey player they expected him to be when Canadiens made a professional league out of the Quebec Hockey League to get him in their uniform.

BURNABY - Part of Van-Stratheona Park is to be taken out of its Class A park status. Recreation Minister Kiernan made this clear when he spoke to the annual convention of B.C. Federation of Fish and Game Clubs Thursday

He said that rather than classing parts of Stratheona Park as Class B he would prefer to destrolled areas, so that logging and mining would come under park control.

First part to change status will almost certainly be around the south end of Buttle Lake and where scores of other mining claims are held.

The minister apparently plans to take parts of parks and designate them as conservancy areas, where nothing can be touched; and designate others as Class A parks, where a minimum of development, and only for recrustional gain, will be permitted. It is going to be tough for British Columbians to see parks whittled away, but Mr. Kiernan promises that after five years, with the creation of new parks and the protection of others. B.C. will be better off.

He said it is a myth that Class A parks now are inviolate because of Crown grants within them.

But within five years he expects to have park cate-
